

Coronavirus: Adapting our Approach to Continue to Serve our Patients

BOSTON, March 19, 2020 – As a company, Servier has always maintained a steadfast focus on putting patients first. This doesn't change, even in uncertain times, such as now.

Indeed, with the current spread of Coronavirus (COVID-19), it's more important than ever that we remain committed to serving our patients' needs. As communities shut down and experts continue to encourage social isolation, Servier has mobilized and reorganized quickly to protect the health and wellbeing of our employees. But we're also committed to maintaining our business operations, because our patients rely on our ability to provide the medicines and guidance they need to get through this new (albeit temporary) normal.

While every company and every individual has a responsibility to do what they can to stop the spread of COVID-19, Servier has a heightened need to support cancer patients and survivors. We cannot be distracted from the important work we do every day to advance oncology, because the patients we serve are among those most vulnerable in the face of this pandemic.

At Servier, we're proud of our employees' relentless drive to improve our patients' lives. In addition to continuing to remain productive, we encourage everyone to consider how we can help patients understand the evolving COVID-19 situation and how they may be uniquely impacted. Rest assured, that throughout these uncertain times, one thing remains constant – Servier's commitment to serve those who depend on us most.
